Smartmatic Technology in Los Angeles County

Where was the work performed in Los Angeles?

Smartmatic established an office in Santa Monica, California where as many as 75 employees were employed. All software development and testing were performed in Santa Monica. The software was installed onto the voting machines in a secure facility operated by LA County.

How secure is Smartmatic's VSAP development process?

All of the software was developed in the United States. Every person working on the software or with access to the County's system-related intellectual property has been rigorously vetted by law enforcement agencies, including a fingerprint background check. There were stringent security protocols on system access and strict controls on access to both the County facilities housing the VSAP devices and Smartmatic's Santa Monica office.

Smartmatic is an approved vendor to the US Department of Defense and a founding member of the US Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Election Infrastructure Sector Coordinating Council. Smartmatic is also an approved supplier to the UK Ministry of Defense.

Where are the servers for the voting machines?

The County's server site for the devices is in a separate location from the voting centers. It is access controlled. Only a small number of top County managers have access to the data center control room. Once the election period begins, Smartmatic does not have access to the data center.
